Questions

In 2011 the European Court of Justice has decided that that every invention regarding a process that includes the prior destruction of embryos, or their use as source material represents an industrial or commercial use of embryos and is therefore not patentable under the European patent regime.

What do you think are the consequences for stem cell research in Europe?